

Students from Eckerd College's class on the "Classical Foundations of the American Legal System" studied in the Criminal Justice Center Courtroom of Judge John Carassas on Jan. 11. The class features both classroom and experimental learning, such as the visit to the courtroom.

Eckerd Students' Experimental Learning Leads Into Courtroom

Class Professor John Prevas, left, expresses gratitude to Judge Carassas. Mr. Prevas has written four books on classical history.

After the students observed a half day of hearings, Judge Carassas answered their questions.

Assistant State Attorney Mike Falkowski, standing, and Jerry Theophilopoulos, a private attorney, stayed around after court to explain their roles in what the students had observed.
